Dear Chairwoman Shaheen, Ranking Member Moran, Chairman Cartwright and Ranking Member Aderholt:

We, the undersigned national organizations representing a broad cross-section of the criminal and juvenile justice systems and impacted communities, thank you for your strong, consistent and thoughtful leadership on federal assistance to strengthen and improve state, tribal and local justice systems. In particular, we thank you for your steadfast support for the Byrne Justice Assistance Grant (Byrne JAG) program and respectfully request that the Fiscal Year 2022 Commerce, Justice, Science and Related Agencies (CJS) appropriations bill restore the funding the program has lost in recent years.

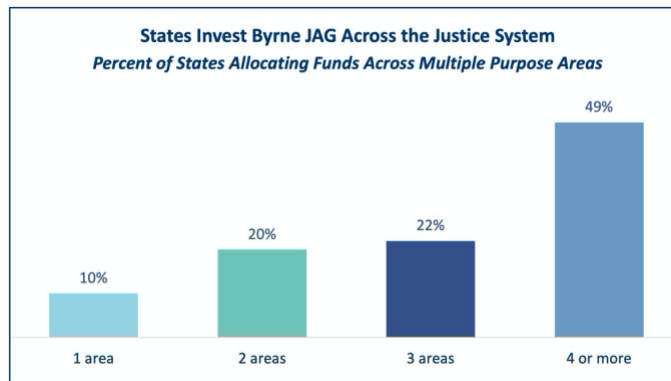

Byrne JAG is the cornerstone federal justice assistance grant program. It is one of the most important tools states and localities have for spurring innovation and for testing and replicating promising practices that make our justice systems more responsive to the needs of the community. Because Byrne JAG is distributed by formula, it reaches every state and a broad cross-section of local communities, from large urban areas to smaller townships and rural counties. Due to Byrne JAG's flexibility, grantees use these funds to address their most pressing needs as well as to fill gaps across the entire justice system – for crime and violence prevention, law enforcement, courts, specialty courts, prosecution, indigent defense, corrections, community corrections, alternatives to incarceration, mental health and substance use disorder treatment and services, as well as a wide array of reentry programs.

This flexibility is the hallmark and advantage of the Byrne JAG program. It allows states to respond quickly to emerging needs and crises. It also means that states and localities can work across systems. This is helpful, even necessary, when considering alternative-to-incarceration programs, particularly for people with mental health and substance use disorders.

Byrne JAG funds also serve as a catalyst for law enforcement and prosecutor collaboration within communities and across states, including the role multijurisdictional task forces play in targeting regional drug trafficking organizations. Grant programs also provide resources to help prosecutors and defenders implement innovative approaches to improve the criminal justice system. And states have replicated the cross-jurisdictional model to tackle cross-boundary crimes, such as human trafficking and cybercrime, while saving money and increasing efficiency.

The National Criminal Justice Association gathers a wealth of information about how the state formula grants are invested through periodic surveys of the State Administering Agencies (SAAs). The statute describes the justice system in eight Purpose Areas. The chart below shows that in 2018 nearly every SAA invested in at least three purpose areas, and nearly half invested in four or more, extending the reach of program dollars across the justice system.

As evidenced by the signatures below, Byrne JAG has the broad support of a dedicated coalition of national organizations from across the criminal and juvenile justice systems, including impacted communities. We recognize the central role Byrne JAG plays in preventing victimization, supporting innovative law enforcement practices, advancing the fair administration of and access to justice, serving and protecting crime victims, improving outcomes for the justice-involved, interrupting the cycle of crime, and leveraging other federal, state, local and private dollars in the balanced functioning of the criminal justice system.

We recognize the competing pressures you face as you seek to prioritize funding for the many important programs in the CJS bill. Funding for Byrne JAG has been reduced by over one-third since FY10, causing a serious contraction in the reach of Byrne JAG-funded programs and hindering our ability to prevent and deter a rise in violent crime, to confront the opioid epidemic, to reduce recidivism, and to improve outcomes for justice-involved individuals in need of mental health and substance use disorder treatment and services. For these reasons we respectfully request a return to the FY10 funding of $520 million for Byrne JAG in the Fiscal Year 2022 CJS appropriations bill.

Thank you for your leadership and your steadfast commitment to the Byrne JAG program.

Sincerely,
